Arbitration Boards Act as Finders of Facts-Judge Applies Law

EXPERTS WILL RULE IN SPECIFIC FIELDS

Speedier Justice With More Consistent Decisions Expected to Result

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU CHICAGO-Commercial boards of arbitration to supplant juries as finders of the facts in civil suits have been adopted by the Municipal Court of Chicago. The new system, modeled after that used in England, is ready to be placed in operation as soon as requests for arbitration are received, according to Judge Harry Olson, chief justice.

Each board is to consist of three men, specialists in their field and qualified to decide problems in ref-erence to it. A claim involving bank-ing custom would thus be decided by three eminent bankers, The boards, however, will rule only on the facts. After these have been determined, the judge will rule on the law appli-

Faster justice and decisions more consistent with the facts are expected to result from the change. Under the new plan, there can be as many courts as there are boards of arbitra-tion and trials can be held in any down-town office where the arbiters find it convenient to meet.

As Judge Olson, who has had 33 years of experience in court reform work, explains it, the board of arbitration is the modern successor of the old jury, which, he argues, has outlived its usefulness in most civil ases.

The Chicago Municipal Court also dorned in establishing the first court, the first election court, he first court of domestic relations

Summarizing the benefits to be gained, Judge Olson declared that the advantages of arbitration over litigation are to be found in intelligent discussions of questions of fact. LORD FISHER'S CAREER TOLD IN BIOGRAPHY

LONDON (A)-The blography of Lord Fisher (1841-1920), by Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon, was published Oct. 10. It was considered a remarkable coincidence that the volume on the career of the admiral who was twice First Sea Lord, should appear during the week of the Washington conversations between Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and President Herbert Hoover.

The author suggests Lord Fishe probably realized he had come back to the Admiralty too late. But he was responsible for the only decisive naval engagement of the entire war, the battle of the Falkland Isles, Dec. 8, 1914, when four German cruisers were sunk.

CIVIL ENGINEERS HEAR ADVICE ON ROAD FINANCING

Fees Should Be Used Solely for Construction, Says G. H. Henderson

Board of Public Roads, and F. E. Everett, Highway Commissioner of New Hampshire, respectively.

Motor vehicles can only be taxed where they are owned, and 80 to 90 per cent are city owned, but to devote any such percentage of the pro-ceeds to city streets would be decidedly unfair, Mr. Henderson said. The city-owned cars use country roads and state highways constantly. The only way to obtain a fair distribution of the tax proceeds is for the State to supervise the expenditure of the entire sum as seems best for the interest of the vehicular traffic of the entire State.

Approves Gasoline Tax

Mr. Everett spoke with approval of the gasoline tax as a means of making the user of the highway pay for its maintenance. In his own state, he said, 50 per cent of the traffic on the state highways is from out of the state. This traffic contributes practically nothing to increased property valuation so it would be unfair to pay for the roads by property assessment. However, the gasoline tax makes all motorists pay their full share.

To devote any of the proceeds of such a tax to other purposes than the maintenance and improvement of the highways he considers unfair. There is no reason why the motorist should be penalized for state fish hatcheries. The man who uses the roads should pay for them, but the ease of taxing him should not be permitted to grow into an abuse whereby the motorists would become reonsible for a disproportionate share of the state tax burden. Mr. Everett also recommended state supervision of the expenditure of all sums derived from license fees and gasoline taxes to insure their equable distribution James H. Taylor, Highway Land-scape Supervisor of Massachusetts urged the engineers to join in the battle against ugliness which is going along public highways. Mr. Taylor's lecture, illustrated by slides, made a deep impression. He spoke of the enormous sums of taxpayers' money, in Massachusetts over $12,000,000 annually, which are being spent on public highways and asked his auditors to join in a campaign to educate the public to an appreciation of its valuable possession. The carelessness of a few, he said, spoils for all the stimulus of a beautiful landscare.

Denounces Litter

He denounced especially those who litter the roadside, contractors who dig into banks along the road and then clutter up everything generally with abandoned tools, empty tar barrels and other relics of their

By graphic illustrations he pointed out the unæsthetic effect of curves which are laid in a series of jerky tangents or improved by what he called the "tin can method" of add-ing pieces on the inside, on of white traffic lines which go wobbling down the center of the road in a quite haphazard manner. All these violate the fundamental conception of "a road which flows along on smooth lines," a conception which should animate the activity of everyone working on a highway, he said. Mr. Taylor recommended the train-

THE Fuller Man represents a world-wide organization whose products are known in every household. No company has done more than the Fuller Brush Co. to help solve the house-cleaning problems of the country. Never before, to our knowledge, has such a searching study been made to lighten woman's burden in

Out of a first-hand knowledge, resulting from personal calls, Fuller has developed a wide array of practical aids to simplify house-cleaning tasks in every room in the house. And, of course, there is a large choice of personal brushes for all members of the family.

Every homekeeper acknowledges this service. That is why she welcomes the Fuller Man when he calls to demonstrate his time-andlabor-saving creations.

Fuller Men call at ten million homes every year. This requires a tremendous sales organization. While this advertisement is being prepared, there are over 3,000 Fuller Men demonstrating Fuller products in American homes. Some have worked for us only a short time. Of these a few will fail to make the grade. It is so in any business. But statistics show that the many who stick have used the years with Fuller as stepping-stones to financial independence. Many have climbed to executive positions and now manage other Fuller Men.

The average earnings of men who have been with our sales organization for three years or more are $4,000 a year.

Rudolf Schuller Tells of Ruins So Buried in Tangled Wastes as to Be Invisible Until 'Under One's Nose'-Covered for Centuries

Dr. Rudolf Schuller, an Austrian, graduate of the University of Vienna and a student of Maya of many years' experience, has written the following article for The Christian Science Monitor. He has alternated research work in Mayan linguistics with field work in the jungles of Yucatan and Guatemala. He is engaged in compiling an analytical dictionary of the score or more dialects of the Maya-Queche divisions at Peabody Museum at Harvard

By RUDOLF SCHULLER

It is very remarkable for scientists aspects as they reveal themselves in archæology to realize that Colonel Lindbergh, in his flights over certain ruins of Maya civilization in the dense jungles of Yucatan and Guatemala, has opened a whole new area of investigating by adding the ele- feeling represented by the ruins ment of survey from the air of the geographic distribution of the already known archæological sites to the means of investigation at the disposal of research and expeditionary students.

To be sure, there is the possibility that Colonel Lindbergh may discover, from the height at which he is obliged to fly, new ruins, although that seems sis of the constituent parts of the to me difficult, because our expeto be covered with a dense, virgin forest and many such ruins were already so hidden when the Spanish Conquerors arrived in Guatemala and Yucatan.

Notwithstanding this work undertaken by Colonel Lindbergh, praise-worthy as it is—because he is so completely the foremost flier of his time, and it is, therefore, of the greatest interest that he should spare time from the purely promotional business of aviation for exploration over the remnants of a forgotten civilization—it will still be necessary for scientists to go to the ruins as they have hitherto; on foot and choping their way with machetes through the jungles, guided by a couple of peons, to clear the terrain of stones that are not a part of the ruins, but which cover them. In order really to explore such places, many factors must be con-sidered. To locate the ruins is the most superficial beginning. To begin most superficial beginning. To begin to unearth them requires not only a great expenditure of money, but of time as well; in the great Maya era, successful travel and work was confined to certain few months in the year; that is to say, from November generally speaking, to the end of May.

This may be the reason, I venture

Chichen-Etza is not far from Merida, the capital city of CAPE TOWN, S. Africa-A new air is not genuinely Mayan, but it is accessible and promises to show a fusion of Mayan and Mexican cultures. WHERE is our civic pride that such offensive carts as this roll up and down the streets, and garbage cans still stand behind our homes?

At best, a garbage can is an unsightly catch-all for the dregs of food. It is a breeding place of vermin and flies; an affront to your entire neighborhood.

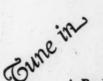

Do your part toward banishing it! There is an easy way. A gas-fired incinerator (garbage burner) quickly reduces garbage to a harmless and sterilized ash. It does more than that. It destroys, before it accumulates, the household rubbish which causes so many fires.

Visit your gas company for an incinerator demonstration. You will be delighted with the simple solution which Gas-The Better Fuel-has found for that troublesome housekeeping problem-garbage disposal.

Attorney-General Asks for Funds to Add to Legal and Clerical Forces

WASHINGTON—William D. Mitchell, Attorney-General, has asked the Director of the Budget for additional funds to clear away court congestion as the result of a half year's elaborate survey of conditions in federal courts.

The need for additional appropriations are backed by the conference of senior circuit judges who con-cluded their annual meeting in Washington, and through their spokes-man, William H. Taft, Chief Justice, stated that "we consider the estimate not more than reasonably sufficient to cover the expenditures which Michigan Public Utilities Company ought to be made."

Mr. Mitchell revealed that he has asked for approximately $9,027,000 for the coming year, as against $8,472,000 last year. Practically all the money will go for additional district attorneys, marshals and clerks.

He explained that the national sur-witnesses ey revealed that 29.95 per cent of testimony. all United States cases are now in-active, that is, no action has been active, that is, no action has been taken on them for a year or longer.

The Servant

I never read the story but I wonder About that young man in the Book of Kings, The servant of the prophet, who is nameless -You know the story: how the host of Syria Compassed the city in the dead of night, And how the young man cried-"Alas, my master, How shall we do?"-"Open his eyes, Lord!" cried The man of God

"And lo, the side of the mountain Was full of horses and chariots of fire About Elisha.'

What had dropped away? Did other things look different as the hill? And did he, I have wondered, ever after, Look with a beating heart on a bare field, Remembering what an empty ridge had held?

I ought to know: for I myself have seen The flaming chariots blazing through the pine And scrub oak; not in chariot form, perhaps, Because it wasn't chariots that I needed To save me at the time; but I have seen For an instant, reinforcement, just at hand! And then the scrub oak shutting in again, And the hot sunshine beating on the pine.

Out the Golden Gate Saturday at noon

... Malolo lands you Wednesday in Hawaii

Only four nights at sea from San Francisco to Honolulu. Sailing on the fast Malolo, you can bask in Waikiki's soothing sunshine hardly a week after you leave dull winter here. That's speed as the modern world demands it.

You're exactly right, too, in assuming that the Malolo's speed means a boat modern in all other ways. Size, for instance. Decks, lounges, even staterooms were designed with a sweeping gesture. The dining saloon proudly soars to unusual height in keeping with its expansive area which seats all guests at once.

Elevators? Yes, to all seven decks. Telephones? One at each bed. Swimming pool, veranda cafe? Most assuredly. You'll enjoy the full Malolo story. Just ask any travel agency or Matson Line: New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland.

Wall Street also was inclined to take an optimistic view of the decline of $91,000,000 in Federal Reserve brokers' loans, although the drop was much smaller than generally expected.

While buying orders were distributed over a fairly broad list, with gains in the active issues ranging from 1 to 12 points, chief bullish demonstrations centered in a select list of specialties, in which favorable developments are believed to be pending.

A wave of selling swept over the market around midday, and prices of several of the leaders yielded rather easily, but snapped back again as soon as pressure was lifted. An assortment of specialties dropped 3 to 11 points below last night's final quotations.

Call money renewed at 6 per cent, and dropped to 5 for the third consecutive day. Time money also was noticeably easier, being quoted at 8 to 8½ per cent. No change was announced in the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank rate.

Convertibles Strong

Convertibles Strong
Convertibles overshadowed the rejuvenated standard issues on the bond market today, making liberal gains in sympathy with the rise in stocks.

A newcomer to the share feature ilst quickly took the leadership in the early trading. Texas Corporation convertible 5s, offered earlier in the week jat 98½, were admitted to trading through the interim receipts, when issued, and opened at 101. Turnover in this debenture crossed the $1,000,000

American Telephone 4½s, which interestore had held undisputed leadership in point of volume since their appearance several months ago, were also bought heavily for a gain of about 4 points, but the turnover was considerably below the Texas bond. International Telephone 4½s sold above 200 for the first time in a fortnight. New Haven 6s gained more than a point and Missouri Pacific 5½s and Atchison 4½s also moved up.

Issues without share features were generally firm, holding the gains they had made during the week. The undertone of time monfey was easier, which isserved to maintain favorable sentiment.

LAMB PRICES UP SHARPLY AT CHICAGO

Fat Kind Rise 75 Cents to $1—Yearling Cattle Firm -Hogs Steady

CHICAGO-Fat lamb prices advanced 75 cents to $1 from last week's low close and yearling cattle went up cents to 75 cents, but weighty steers sold weak to 50 cents lower, and there was little change in hog prices during the week ended Oct. 10, according to a report by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

The active trade in yearlings, particularly light kinds, featured the week's cattle market, and at the close these weights were in very good demand at the full advance. The week's top was $16.50 paid for 1044-pound offerings, and numerous loads sold from $14.50 @16, light heifers selling as high as $15.

Heifers scaling under 800 pounds sold freely from $13@14.50, and this activity on yearlings was responsible for all grades of heifers showing a 50-cent advance, Even heavy steers and fat cows were mostly 25 cents higher, the latter class selling from $7 @8.50 for the bulk.

and fat cows were mostly 25 cents higher, the latter class selling from $7 (28.50) for the bulk.

Weighty steers predominated in receipts, and although there was a dependable demand for strictly choice loads, in-between grades were hard to sell, even at the week's decline. Finished cattle of these weights sold above $15.50, but the bulk of the supply cashed from $12.50 to $14.50.

There were nearly 17,000 Western igrass cattle in receipts, and the bulk of these that went on killing account brought from $9.50@10.50, $12.85 representing the week's top. Most of the stockers and feeders hold from $9.25@10.75, light kinds of outstanding quality selling up to $12.25 although relatively few sold above $11.25.

The narrowing of the price range in favor of weighty hogs and packing sows featured the week's hog market. Hogs scaling under 240 pounds sold 15 to 25 cents lower, while heavier weights gained 15 to 25 cents. The predominance of light and medium weight hogs in receipts was responsible for the feadjustment in values.

The late top was $10.25, and the bulk of the better grade hogs scaling from 160 to 280 pounds sold from $9.85@10.20. Big weight butchers ranged down to $9 for 394-pound averages and the most of the 120 to 160-pound weights brought from $9.60@10. Packing sows sold from $8.69.

The improved dressed lamb trade was responsible for the aggressive demand for fat lambs that carried prices 75c@$1 higher. The week's top for range lambs was $13.75, with the best natives at $13.60, and the bulk of the supply from $13@13.50. Feeding lambs were active at 25 cents higher prices. a spread of $12.25@13 taking most consignments.

The Listener Speaks

C LORIA SWANSON made her first bow to the microphone in London a month ago — but in making her air debut in America she confessed to a slight feeling of "mike fright," and substantiated her statement by breaking off her speech and lapsing into quite schoolgirlish giggles. When it came to singing, her forthcoming talking picture "The Trespasser." Victor, which sponsored this program at 10:30 on Thursday, is issuing records of these same num bers which should prove attractive for their own sake as well as on ac count of the wide popularity of the singer. The rest of the Victor period was occupied by the orchestras under the expert direction of Rosario Bourdon and Nathaniel Shilkret.

The two preceding half hour periods through the WEAF network were also interesting. The Halsey Stuart Hour appropriately introduced the talk by the "Old Counselor" with "Thou Swell" and "S'wonderful." The discourse dealt with a query in regard to very comfortable sounding bonds. The program concluded with a selection from Reginald De Koven's "Robin Hood"—a character whose financial dealing would scarcely meet with the approval of the "Old Counselor's' sponsors. The Jack Frost program at 9:30 was notable for the good orchestral music, directed by Eugene Ormandy, with an occasional violin passage by him. Very interesting arrangements of old and new favorites from "Poor Butterfly" to "Some Sweet Day" were

"Sweetness" is naturally featured in this program dedicated to lump sugar—but there is none of that saccharine-flavored music which it migh he suspected would gain a hearing h this means. On the other hand, the characteristic of Mr. Ormandy's mu sic is originality and virility.

In the middle of the period a father was overheard as he told a breath lessly interesting and admiring family group of his visit to the largest refinery operated by the sponsors. The whole conversation was of the kind not likely to be heard outside of an advertising office, but it contained some interesting figures, as, for instance, that this one factory can turn out 260 carloads of sugar

DUBLIN OPENS FINE GALLERY OF MODERN ART

Lane Pictures Returned to Irish Free State

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR DUBLIN-After 23 years of controversy, Dublin is at last the proud possessor of a Municipal Gallery of Modern Art worthy of the Lane collection of valuable pictures which is said to be the most interesting collection of modern art in Europe. Through lack of a suitable gallery, these masterpieces have lain like buried treasures in a small badly lit building in Harcourt Street since 1908. In presence of a representative gathering of citizens and with fitting ceremonial, Charlemont House was formally presented by President Cosgrave to the City Commissioners as a gift to the Nation, to serve as a municipal gallery and civic museum

In making the presentation President Cosgrave paid a high tribute to Sir Hugh Lane, who had provided the gallery with the existing nucleus of established in Dublin a municipal gallery of modern art which would stand in relation to the National Gallery somewhat in the same position that the Luxembourg stands to the Louvre. The value of such a gallery to students could not be overestimated.

The opening of Charlemont House is to be made the occasion of a vigorous campaign to secure the return of the 39 pictures left to Dublin by Sir Hugh Lane, which are now re-tained in the Tate Gallery, London. Who: SIR WALTER RALEIGH. Where: England and the New

When: Sixteenth to seventeenth

Why famous: An English explorer, yearly. gentleman-adventurer and courtier. Few facts being available, the romanticists have had their own way with his childhood; one artist has made a rather engaging picture, in which a wide-eyed lad perches high upon a parapet above the Cornish sea and listens to the tales of a swarthy, ear-ringed sailor back from the Spanish Main. Whatever the real little boy may have imagined as to his own future, the actuality could hardly have been more colorful and stirring. Raleigh neglected few of the opportunities which came the way of an Elizabethan gentleman. So fleet and brilliant was his progress that it is none too easy to follow in retro-

Born in Devon, he had his term a Oxford, then for a time embraced the cause of the Huguenots in France. Later he sailed with his half-brother, Sir Humphrey Gilbert, on a piratical expedition against the Spaniards. Presently he was back in London, at tached to the train of some nobleman; or he was in Ireland, helping to put down a rebellion in Munster or staying with Spenser while he wrote the Faerie Queene. He had his period of court popularity, when the Queen several large, rough-looking crea-heaped upon him lands and titles, tures which I learned afterward were ways he made an appeal to Elizabeth: he had wit, he could make clever verses, he was handsome and her mother to allow her to take me so that her daddy and mother had charm of manner, he was a past master at the art of flattery. After a time Raleigh, entertaining risions of England's colonial future, attempted colonization; but his Virginia plantation was premature and a failure. He was altogether involved in a number of expeditions destined to intercept the Spanish trade with the New World. A married man, he tried to settle quietly on his country estates; but he could not, and was soon off once more, searching for gold mines in a reputed South American El Dorado. His attempts to bring about war with Spain did not accord with the peace policies of Elizabeth's successor, James I. So the end of the chapter is tragic.

In prison the imperturbable Raleigh busied himself with writing a did not think she wanted a kitty at more unfortunate expedition to the away, I really looked rather threat of execution. An Opportunity for the Wets

FAR be it from us to cast any unfair aspersions upon the same sions upon the eager, law-defying efforts of the nullification wets to defeat prohibition. But it is difficult to read Edna Yost's article in a recent issue of the Outlook without feeling somehow that everything is not all right within the ranks of the anti-prohibitionists.

Now Miss Yost, who herself is an opponent of the Eighteenth Amendment and a frequent contributor to American magazines, is fearful lest the repeal of the amendment is not proceeding as rapidly as it should, and to quote her specific words, "It seems to me that it is the stupidity of certain wets rather than the intolerance of the drys which is the more important, less excusable present-day menace to our cause." Miss Yost may be pretty hard on the wets, but she is tremendously serious, and as she continues to develop her thesis she doesn't let up a bit. She writes:

I likewise believe that the large-scale law smashing of which, with a hiccoughing regularity, so many of the wets loudly and proudly boast, is rousing a wave of antagonism all over the country which has already driven into the prohibition camp thousands of prospective votes. . . ,

Who will not agree that law smashing, as Miss Yost so aptly puts it, is neither an honest nor an effective method of repealing law? And in this regard it is hard not to conclude that many wets have been guilty on both scores. While they have been clamorously deploring the abuses which have occurred through the violations of the prohibition law, they have been energetically encouraging the violation of that

What, then, can the wets do to bolster up their cause? Miss Yost offers the following:

One undeniable thing the wets must accomplish is to secure as big a vote among the women as they can. . . . When—or if—the wets get over their infantile hating of the drys long enough to use their heads on the construction of some practical plan which is better than the oldfashioned saloon and superior to the intolerance of prohibition, and then start to work for it intelligently, they will have no difficulty in appealing to the woman vote.

Miss Yost has handled the wets rather roughly for their failure to advance "some practical plan" for the control of the liquor traffic. But does not she give a clue to this failure by herself neglecting to give the faintest suggestion of any constructive program to supplant prohibition?

Will it not eventually occur to sincere and nondrinking wets that the thoroughgoing enforcement of the prohibition law, which can be made possible by their earnest co-operation, will most quickly demonstrate either its futility or its success, and that therein they can make a real contribution to the cause of temperance and law obedience?

This Younger Generation

HILE many estimable people are bemoaning the so-called waywardness of this present generation-forgetting, incidentally, that they are themselves of this generation-reports come from Chicago that the executive board of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers is mapping out a course of parent education to meet an insistent demand from fathers and mothers.

The news is encouraging. No generation can be so very badly misled by the apparently hectic tempo of its times when a considerable body of its representatives thus shows itself alert to the responsibilities of parenthood. No generation need be dubious of its destination when fathers and mothers are willing to study their job.

The best traditions of America date back to the old Anglo-Saxon ideal of the complete social unit called home, where wise parental authority was unquestioned, and the necessary lessons of discipline and obedience were taught and demonstrated by precept and example. Changes in the physical character of the home, brought about by increasing population and the trend toward more congested quarters, has brought no alteration in parents' obligation to their children. So long as their example remains worthy, their interest lively, their sympathy and understanding broad, parents need not fear that the reins of authority may slip from their fingers prematurely. Gratifying indeed is the assurance—indicated by the wide public interest in the work of parent and teacher organizations—that conscientious parents now have the backing and encouragement of large bodies of thoughtful people in their work of holding ever higher the inspiring banner of clean, vigorous, law-abiding American young manhood and womanhood.

More Than Wages for Labor

DY THE terms of the will of Thomas E. Mitten, Philadelphia traction magnate, which has just been probated, the bulk of the estate is to be used to establish a foundation "to advance the cause of co-operation between Capital and Labor and to extend the Mitten pian." Thus a laboratory experiment in the improvement of industrial relations, which was once regarded merely as a pet "hobby" of Mr. Mitten's gains a fair prospect of reaching international importance and influence.

Mr. Mitten came to Philadelphia more than twenty years ago when the city was troubled by a distressing labor situation involving the transit facilities. He had been successful in other cities, notably in Buffalo, and when he had sized up the Philadelphia predicament, refused to take hold unless he was given a free hand. This was granted and within a comparatively short time labor troubles ceased and a new definition of Labor's obligation to Capital and Capital's obligation to Labor appeared.

The Mitten plan, briefly, is that above his wages the worker is entitled to a share in the fruits which he helps to produce, but only in so far as his willingness, diligence, sobriety and efficiency contribute to increasing such fruits. At the same time, Mr. Mitten held, Labor must share the responsibilities of the investment with Capital. Through operation of this plan during his leadership in traction affairs in Philadelphia, the employees of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company acquired approximately one-third of the company's common stock, which they had been allowed to buy in installments. Most of the money for these purchases came from wage dividends based on the company's gross earnings. The more the company earned the greater was the wage dividend, and thus an incentive to increase company revenues and their own earnings was offered the workers.

There is every indication that the Mitten Foundation will extend its activities far beyond the limits of Philadelphia. The donor's estate, estimated at from $2,000,000 to $10,000,000, will, with the exception of comparatively small family bequests, be devoted to promoting cooperation between Capital and Labor, and, by the terms of the will, may serve anywhere in the world the trustees deem its service is needed.

"Howdy" or "Hello"

"ELLO," "Operator," "Wrong number," "Excuse it, please," "Line's busy," have long been standard phrases in ordinary telephone talk, but now a telephone company has decided that this jargon needs some revision. It believes the public prefers the more intimate personal touch, and has modified instructions to operators accordingly. Girls no longer need add the conventional "Thank you," but may answer as the mood of the moment suggests. Perhaps the cheerful "Howdy" will now take the place of "Hello."

The trend of the times has been toward greater and greater mechanization. Efficiency experts have drawn impressive salaries for reducing operations to automatic responses. What is to become of all this labor if do-as-you-please is to be introduced again into the day's work? Possibly the next innovation will be that collegiate gentlemen will cast aside their raccoon coats and their crushed felts-along with their standardized campus vocabulary.

"Hello" is easier than the formal, "This is Mr. Willoughby speaking," and much friendlier, but a brief "Thank you" relayed in the dulcet voice of the operator may be preferable to some bright flash of originality which prompts the listener to ask, "Eh, how's that?" We can choose the happy medium between entirely dehumanizing the telephone and making the operator such a clever conversationalist that we forget our number-and the reason for lifting the receiver.

Democratizing the British Cabinet

IN THE TIMES of London an interesting article has drawn attention to the family groups in the present House of Commons and compared them with similar groups in the House of 1829. Today the leaders of all three parties have sons, and one of them a daughter, in the House; the Foreign Secretary, Arthur Henderson, has two sons, and his predecessor in office has a brother. A hundred years ago the family complexion of the House was much more pronounced, since it included thirty-two pairs of brothers and eleven sets of fathers and sons. The House of 1829 had also a distinctly more aristocratic personnel than the House of today can boast, for it numbered among its members 178 men who were relatives of peers, compared with the twenty-two of the present time.

This perhaps suggests that in the past the British Government has been chiefly in aristocratic hands, but this is hardly the case. In England the younger sons of peers are commoners, so that entrance into and exit from the ranks of the British nobility has always been, compared with European countries, a simple matter. Even so, until fairly recent times, no complaint about English government has been more common than that it has rested with "novi homines"-new men of humble origin, and all the world knows that the proudest of English statesmen, Thomas Wolsey, was the son of a butcher. With the decline of royal power in the eighteenth eentury, however, the aristocracy came into greater authority than it had ever enjoyed before, and it is interesting to observe how gradual has been the process by which British government has become democratized to its present state.

The process is clearly revealed in tables of the Cabinets of 1801-1924 which have been compiled by Prof. Harold J. Laski. From 1801 to 1831 the Cabinet was almost exclusively an aristocratic body, and even after the second Reform Act of 1867 the nobility still held 60 per cent of the cabinet posts. Only one business man sat in any cabinet prior to the Reform Act of 1832, but after that date the representation of business men began to increase. However, no radical change took place in the personnel of the Government until 1905. Ramsay MacDonald's Cabinet of 1923 was the first to introduce trade unionists into the Government, an experiment which Mr. Mac-Donald has repeated in his second tenure of office. The democratization of British politics has been a somewhat slow procedure, but it has been free from the upheavals that often hold up the course of those who try to progress too quickly.

"It's Terrible, It's Terrible!"

MID all that has been said about eliminating A excessive noise from city living, one of the most harsh of the disturbing sounds of urban streets has not yet been mentioned in the groups of noises which civic organizations propose to combat.

Sitting in a tenth-floor hotel room in almost any large city one can hear-above the clanging trolley car, the rumble of trucks, the continuous honking of automobile horns and the tap-tap of steel riveting-the "cry" of the newsboys. If these harsh, shrill, often nasal voices can be heard above the traffic as far as the tenth floor, how much more disturbing is it to the person walking on the street who has it shouted in his very ear. For of all discordant noises nothing is more disturbing than the misused and overused human voice.

The newsboys are not entirely to blame. They have been led to believe that this is the right kind of sales method. Happily, the public can show them that mere noise is not effective. Especially offensive is the fact that it is nearly always the sensational and crime news which forms the theme of the shouting.

One newsboy, heard in a large city recently shouting a sensational headline time after time, found himself apparently so much at loss for words with which to impress his hearers that he finished up with, "It's terrible, it's terrible!" And it was.

Canada, Neighbor and Customer

TN ADDITION to the fast-spreading commercial ties which are bringing Canada and the United States into economic partnership, the Dominion is developing an overseas trade, which is giving her a position of growing importance in world trade channels. Moreover, to a considerable extent the products of Canadian farms and factories, as well as the incoming goods from distant ports, are handled in Canadian ships, for Canada has a merchant marine of her own which, if not large, is modern and Across the Pacific silk is brought in the white fleet of the Canadian Pacific, en route, frequently, to United States points via Vancouver, while westward, both Canadian and Japanese vessels are handling an increasing volume of wheat which is becoming a staple food in Japan. Likewise, from Vancouver, and to a small extent from its rival to the north, Prince Rupert, vessels move southward bound for the Panama Canal en route to European destinations.

The Atlantic trade is better known, but its rapid growth and its expansion into new fields is less generally recognized. A fleet of new vessels equipped for the West Indies trade has just been completed by the Canadian National Railways. From a score of ports throughout the islands of the Caribbean and Atlantic, tropical products and fruit move northward to St. John or Halifax for distribution by rail inland. From South American countries northward ladings include rubber from Brazil, maize from the Argentine, and bauxite (for use in making aluminum) from British Guiana, while en route southward, manufactured goods compose the bulk of the traffic.

This development is obviously but a forerunner of an even greater measure of prosperity in the future, a prosperity in which the United States will share, for Canada is not only a good neighbor but the United States' best customer.

Literature Wins the Worker

IN AN article in a recent issue of the Nineteenth Century J. Dover Wilson has drawn attention to the important fact that economics and industrial history no longer maintain their predominance as the favorite subjects of students of the British Workers' Educational Association. Until a few years ago economic problems occupied the attention of these students almost exclusively; other subjects, particularly English literature, were regarded suspiciously as part and parcel of "bourgeois culture." The value of education was held to lie entirely in its capacity to improve social and industrial conditions. Alfred Zimmern has related how a Lancashire working man, on being told of the work of a celebrated astronomer, inquired somewhat scornfully, What is the use of astronomy for social reform? This is an attitude easy to understand. and not difficult to sympathize with. But it is encouraging to observe that, with rising standards, it is rapidly becoming rare. From the report of His Majesty's Inspectors on Adult Education in Yorkshire, which in this respect is one of the most progressive areas in Great Britain, it appears that literature is easily the most popular subject of study, having eightynine classes against the sixty-seven numbered by economics and industrial history together; while of all the classes in England and Wales working under the regulations of the Board of Education during the session 1927-28 the numbers for these subjects were respectively 450

Nevertheless, the former preoccupation with economics has not been without its very valuable results. The practical experience of working people of the harsher side of industrial existence has reacted on the classic economic theories with an admirable and humanizing effect. Anyone who compares the attitude of a modern textbook toward social legislation with that of an economist like Herbert Spencer will note the difference.

Editorial Notes

An excellent example of truth in advertising appeared in a Massachusetts paper the other day. "We made an error in our advertisement for 95-cent rings," said the department store, and went on to explain:

We stated "a sample line of rings which ordinarily would sell for 5 and 7.50." This is only partly true. They ARE samples, but we find, upon careful investigation, rings of identical value retailing for $1 to $2.50. If you are dissatisfied with the ring you bought, return it, and we will cheerfully refund your money.

There's no doubt that such advertising pays.

If the new geographic crackers which are made in the form of the various states of the Union taste as good as the famous animal crackers, it won't be very often that the children will be able to piece them together and make the entire

Boiled Rice for Claverly Street

PROBABLY everyone will agree that one of the most | it on the next burner. I thought I had settled the prob nutritious dishes in the world is rice. Whole nations thrive on it. The rice fields of the Irrawaddy-it should be the Irrawaddy-are useful and picturesque. But rice as an article of the kitchen is one of the most deceptive foods that man-I lay emphasis on that last wordever prepared.

It was all the fault of Mary Ellen, Mary Ellen is our cook on Claverly Street. It was her day off, and, as the mistress of the house was also absent, it devolved upon me to prepare supper for myself, and Alan Mayne and Toodles. Let me see; there was in addition, Woof-woof, the dog; and Rastus, the black man, and there was the Little Red Hen, too, but as these only pretended to eat and could not object to rice, one way or another, they really did not count.

It occurred to me that rice would make a suitable meal As I have said, it is nutritious. The banks of the Irrawaddy -but there! Never mind that. Suffice it to say that there was a great canister of rice in the neat kitchen cabinet, is my wife's pride and which Mary Ellen scours every Thursday, and that I decided it was just the thing for the evening meal. I took what seemed to me at the time a reasonable amount of it, and put it in the medium sized aluminum double-boiler (the one with the dented lid) to cook. 1 1 1

Perhaps, I said to myself, I have taken too much rice. But then—Alan Mayne has an enormous appetite and is likely to try to distinguish himself while his mother is away. And Toodles is the most capacious cat I know, and will rise to any emergency.

So it all started off happily. Alan Mayne climbed into the high chair in the kitchen and told me exactly where I should find his bib and tucker and the pewter porringer, and the cup with the Mad Hatter on it, and Toodles purred and rubbed my leg.

It was while I was hunting for the bread and butter and the other ingredients of the meal that I first noticed something peculiar going on on the stove. The steam was issuing cheerfully from the double-boiler, when there came a sort of tapping at the lid as though my rice were telling me it was all cooked and ready to be taken out. The idea pleased me and I told Alan Mayne about it. Alan Mayne is an appreciative boy, and after he had made me repeat the thought once or twice, and had looked at me quite hard for a time, his face broke into smiles and he reiterated the idea to Toodles. Toodles purred.

It was just at this juncture that the lid of the doubleboiler really did come off. I had got the bacon on to fry, and the water on to boil, and was otherwise actively engaged. But the rice did not wait. The lid rose leisurely until it had ascended several inches, and fell off. I put the lid back, and pushed it down, but it fell off again in a few seconds-this time with a clatter. I discovered that all the interior rice was engaged in a process of active expansion. It was swelling before my very eyes.

I-scooped some of the rice into another pan, and placed | place.

lem, and said as much to Alan Mayne. But I was quickly undeceived. This time both lids fell off. I confess it took extreme agility on my part to get additional pots going before the rice from the original pans had toppled out of place. As I looked at the crowded stove, where four pots were now steaming, I began to realize for the first time that Γ should probably have too much rice for supper.

I hurriedly seized my wife's cookbook. If I could only determine the expansibility of rice, then I should know in advance how many more pots I should require; but although I found recipes in hundreds, no word on this important matter could I discern. There was still a little room on the stove, and I had just time to get the kitchen colander in action before all four pots popped their covers off, one after another, and a cascade of rice hovered on the brink of descending.

My motions now became frantic. What actually occurred t this point is still rather clouded in my memory. I have the postimpression of a series of bottomless funnels all spouting forth boiled rice at once, while I reached from one to another of them like a man playing a sort of domestic xylophone. It was as useless to stop the progress of the rice in these pans by pressing down the lids as to stop the progress of a glacier.

Alan Mayne watched in astonishment, while Toodles liscreetly vanished, as the culinary symphony became louder. With the inspiration of despair, it occurred to me to turn off the burners. Even with this done, however, the pans of rice for some time continued to expand, and to shake off their shackles and pour upon the floor.

I never saw so much boiled rice. There was enough for a Chinese army. Alan Mayne immediately demanded what had happened. With the iteration of childhood and the urge of a philosopher, he went through each particular minutely, and explained my motives to Toodles as fast as I grudgingly vouchsafed them.

There was nothing to do but eat the rice. We all pitched in, Alan Mayne, Toodles and I, but our appetites gave out long before the rice did.

As we ate, my wife quietly entered the kitchen: As I recollect it, she started to speak, glanced at the stove (where by now the still swelling rice had reached even the preserving kettle) and stopped suddenly.

"I just—ah—cooked a little rice for supper," I explained with attempted casualness.

The disposal of that rice remains one of our problems. Various solutions were proposed, but were not acceptable. Even Alan Mayne's very sensible project—that he be allowed to go out and "sell daddy's rice"—was finally rejected. My family and the rest of Claverly Street have been eating rice ever since, though I think if the diet continues much longer, a large yellow cat, named Toodles, will be looking around for another boarding R. The Plaudits of Silence

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

The plaintive editorial entitled "Dear Mr. Editor" has remained in my thought since I read it, and while I have read one or two letters upon the subject, none of them has quite said what I should like to see said (or should I say "hear said"?) or offered the apology I would offer to the long-suffering and abused editor.

The point of the editorial was that when the editor spends hours of labor gathering the information and arranging the arguments for an erudite editorial upon international relations, and writes it with pains and care and perhaps no little pride, he receives very little response to his effort in the way of letters of appreciation from the great lay, but silent, public; but when, in a moment of lightness, relaxation, and perhaps even frivolity, he tosses off a trifle about, say, "blueberry pie," his mail is instantly jammed with protesting or admiring expressions from a public suddenly loosed from its silence and roused from

Now, speaking as one of those who read largely in silence regarding both international relations and blueberry pie (I confess the blueberry pie almost did move me to literary endeavor), may I suggest that the silence upon our part is due to modesty and a gratitude not easily expressed. We read avidly (if Mr. Editor could only see how avidly) the results of his painstaking research into the intricacies of subjects beyond our own investigation. We read them thoughtfully, ponder them, and add them to our store of information. We are grateful for them in our silent way as the horse is grateful for his oats. The horse cannot grow his own oats, nor even buy them, but he can eat them, and his master receives his thanks in sturdier pulling power. So with us, the patient truck horses of international opinion, we feed and digest, and pull ahead in

But let us read an editorial upon blueberry pie or the grammatical construction of a certain agricultural product, which here shall be nameless since that discussion is ended, or any other of the myriad trifling subjects upon which we, the public, no longer consider ourselves lay and we wax controversial. We cease to feel embarrassed at the possibility of appearing in print. We know whereof we speak. We express ourselves. We rebuke the ignorance or the frivolity of the editor. We state facts. We feel relieved thereby.

Dear Mr. Editor, do not feel that your best efforts are those that are unappreciated. They are simply too awe-inspiring to provoke an answer. The comedian receives vociferous evidence of his success; the tragedian knows he has reached the heart of his audience only by their profound silence, and is gratified thereby. Do you be New York.

Drama Over the Radio

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: I was very much interested in your editorial, entitled

'Drama Over the Radio," in the issue of September 18. As one who is engaged in the work of supplying mate rial for broadcasting stations and radio advertisers, it is interesting to read what someone thinks the future of the radio drama may be. I would like to differ with your editorial writer to a certain extent, but agree with him up to It is quite true that the technique of the stage is unsuited to the microphone, but stage stories may be adapted to radio by using the technique of the radio. Your editorial writer assumes that this technique has yet to be developed. It is already being developed. The requirements for radio drama are short, snappy speeches, clearly indicat ing who is speaking and who is being addressed, rapid action, with no superfluous words, in other words, an avoidance of verbosity, and few characters (five at most). From an educational standpoint, I agree with your editorial writer that the rhetorical play lends itself admirably to the radio. It is highly artistic in effect, but it cannot be put on a program more than once a month. I remember several seasons ago being with a company that put "Peer Gynt" over the radio. As a production it was beautiful, but as a popular radio performance it only appealed to the few. Of course, it is worth while going to the expense of putting on very high class things, and we are trying to do so. However, I would like to correct the impression cre ated by your editorial that the radio drama of the future would be in the style of Euripides or Schiller. It will be far from it. It will be the dramatic sketch, with rapid action, short dialogue (not more than three lines to a speech, and, if possible, less), unless, of course, a certain dramatic point is to be sustained, in which case the speech will have to be extremely good to hold your audience.

I think to put television into radio would spoil it as an art. It takes away the illusion and leaves nothing to the imagination. The art of pantomime is an art by itself, so is that of the stage, and so is elocution. Radio will offer an opportunity for dramatic elecution that heretofore has only been offered to the one who could act as well as recite.

You say in your editorial that "unless radio transmission undergoes some fundamental alteration it will continue to give particular value to the human voice which rhetorical drama is admirably fitted to exploit." I think I have already answered that point, but change the word "human" to male. You will find that the sonorous male voice is the one that is the most effective over the air, and you will find that many of the radio performances will have to be written around men of strong and virile characters, men who embody the qualities we admire, and the actors will have to be those with a voice of deep tonal qualities. I do not disparage the work of women on the air, but I do think the male voice, especially the deep, voice, comes over best of all.

Radio drama is a very interesting development, and we do not know yet how far we can go. I camot give away any state secrets, so that I must omit from this letter some of the details regarding our plans in this particular or-ganization. I will say that any station that thinks it will teed its audience plays à la Sophocles is going to find itself

You may argue that the little bits of music interspersed in the course of the action, or the announcements of the radio announcer are akin to the function of the chorus in the Greek tragedy; that, of course, is true, and perhaps the only likeness

The great lack at the present time is people who have the knack of writing for the radio. A story generally has to be entirely rewritten for radio production. Sometimes only the kernel of the original narrative can be used. The dramatists whom this organization employs are men who after having had plays on Broadway, have developed new technique for radio. They have been at it for four years. They are responsible for "Great Moments in History," which is a little masterpiece, making history remarkably interesting. I will add that the short story with good dia logue indicating action lends itself admirably to radio dramatization

The present writer feels that if one could take the plays of the ancient Greeks and adapt them for the radio in a way that would bring out the characters and the stories and do away with sententious phraseology, we might get the masses interested in the Greek authors. I know from experience, because I have listened to classics in company with people whose tastes were well cultivated, but who were decidedly bored with them.

Pianissimo

THERE are certain paradoxes at the heart of existence which provide philosophers with a substitute for crossword puzzles and university extension lecturers with a steady livelihood. "Sweetest nut hath sourcest rind," sang Touchstone, and music which soothes savage breasts makes them savage first.... There are no words more searing than the remarks of a professor of music on jazz. Music, purest of human pleasures, music that stills the waters and accompanies the love passages in melodramas, music which is beyond the petty human limitations of logic and words, is also an apple of discord, a creator of such strife and backbiting that Epstein is by comparison a peacemaker.

But from Vienna there comes news comforting to a world insufficiently provided with padded rooms. The silent piano has been invented. The gymnast who scales octaves and turns somersaults in arpeggios need but provide himself with one of these instruments and put on a pair of headphones and he is self-centered; his piano whispers back his own secrets, and the world at large is no wiser. Students of the pianoforte have long had a grudge against Keats, who voted for unheard melodies They may now withdraw their opposition and buy a soundless instrument .- Daily Telegraph (London).

Effective Enforcement

NEARLY a quarter of a century ago, when Henry M. Beardsley was mayor, he had a careful survey made of the places that were selling liquor with and without a license. There were 600 saloons paying the city license fee and about 2100 joints that were operating without paying the fee. Some of these paid the government tax, but the majority did not. At that time Kansas City was about half the size of the present city. If it had the same relative number of liquor selling places today that it had twenty-three years ago, it would have approximately 6000.

The police report that five months ago they found about 1000 places which they suspected of selling liquor. That number is now reduced to 300. Only about one-twentieth as many as were open in preprohibition days.

Anyone who supposes that 300 places sell as much liquor as 6000 places would have sold is welcome to the opinion for his own use. But he will find it hard to get other people to believe it .- Kansas City Star.
